

DEBT QUESTION TO BE RELEGATED TO FAR REAR SEAT

Administration Plans May Not Be Successful,
However

TARIFF TO BE FOREMOST

Conference To Be Broadened to Include All Countries of Europe

WASHINGTON, D. C., Apr. 13.—The troublesome foreign debt question is going to be relegated to a seat far in the rear of the "little economic conference" which will hold the center of the stage in Washington for the next two months—if the administration has its way.

Whether the administration will be successful in its undertaking remains to be seen. Probably, it is admitted, the issue cannot be avoided in one way or another, but all plans now being laid by Secretary of State Hull contemplated soft-peddling the debts and bearing down heavily upon what the administration considers of more importance—tariff; monetary stabilization; lifting artificial trade restrictions and kindred matters.

Broadening of the scope of the conference to include all the countries of the world, Soviet Russia alone excepted, contribute to the non-debts character of the discussion. As now shaped up, every nation with which the United States has diplomatic relations has been invited to make its economic views known to Washington in advance of the World Economic Conference which meets in London probably about July 1, 1933.

The debt question has entered freely into the conversations between Secretary of State Hull and Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, which have been in progress here almost daily for more than a month.

Democrats of County Hold Jefferson Dinner

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 13.—Speakers at the Jefferson Day dinner staged Tuesday night in the 11th Regiment Armory by the Bucks County Democratic Club praised President Roosevelt and commented at length on "the deal" and success of the administration so far.

J. Lawrence Rupp, of Allentown, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate last year, and George Douglass, of Philadelphia, candidate for Superior Court on the Democratic ticket in 1930, were the guest speakers of the evening.

Nearly 200 men and women from various sections of Bucks county enjoyed a dinner and then listened to a fine program at which time Colonel George Ross, of Doylestown, was toastmaster. The presiding officer of the evening was Frank X. Shelley, of Doylestown, president of the club.

This was the first Jefferson Day dinner of a county-wide nature that was ever staged in Bucks county.

Mr. Rupp congratulated the Bucks County Democratic Club on the success of the affair and predicted continued success and interest in the club.

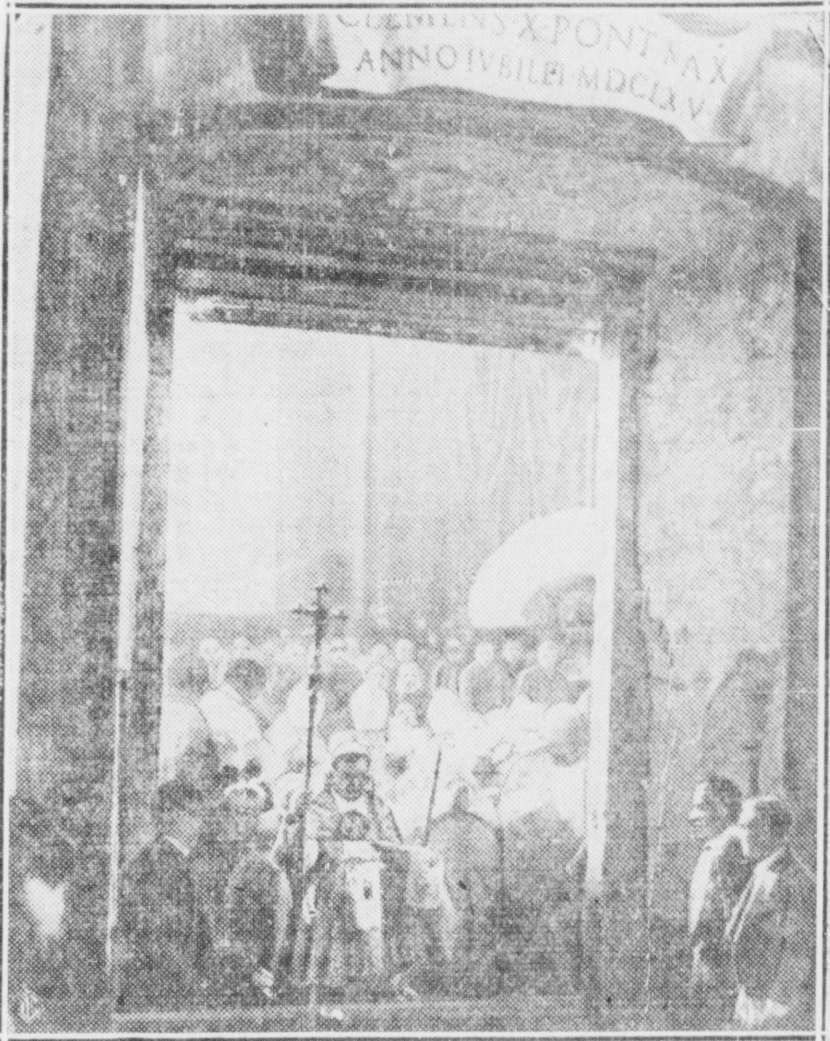

Mr. Douglass spoke principally on state politics and dwelt considerably on the present session of the State Legislature which he declared "has accomplished nothing because of factional strife dividing opinions and making it impossible to accomplish much."

ATTENTION TO RELIEF FOR NEXT BIENNium

Governor Pinchot and Leaders
Consider Program For Such

EMERGENCY IS MET

By William J. Kelly
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Apr. 13.—(INS)—Satisfied that Pennsylvania's distressed jobless shall not go hungry before June, Assembly leaders and Gov. Gifford Pinchot today turned their attention to a relief program for the next biennium.

By signing the Talbot bill for $5,000,000, the Governor brought $12,000,000 into the coffers of the state emergency relief board for use during the next six weeks. Seven millions of this was expected from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the basis of its agreement to match the amount advanced by the State.

While the emergency has been met, hope of immediate compromise between belligerent factions on the two-year program has vanished. Governor Pinchot and the Republican organization agree on only one point—that $18,000,000 must be appropriated. How the revenue will be raised is the barrier that must be removed.

Notwithstanding the wide differences of opinion, the Senate considered on final passage today the Scott bill appropriating $13,000,000 for the needy during the next biennium. This amount will be boosted to $18,000,000 when it reaches the House. The principal question is the method by which the money will be raised.

Governor Pinchot stands firmly by his proposals for readjustment of the foreign corporation tax, collection of personal property taxes by the State, and beer tax as revenue producers. The organization looks to the Turner economy bill for its salvation. It likewise is inclined to favor the beer tax for relief revenue.

The Turner measure, House Bill No. 22, which the Governor repeatedly has termed a "fake economy" document, was to receive second reading in the Senate today and then returned to committee for further consideration and amendment. The executive board, which would have severely cut down the powers of the Governor, has been eradicated.

This legislation, which has encountered a thorny path, contains the provisions to carry out the drastic cuts made in the Governor's general appropriation bill. This likewise has gone back to the appropriation's committee after being passed on second reading.

The principal changes will be the insertion of appropriations for East.

PERKASIE COUNCIL WARS ON BILLBOARDS

May Increase Assessments On Properties Having Them

EYE-SORE TO ANY TOWN

PERKASIE, Apr. 13.—A new plan for discouraging the use of billboards whereby the land owners themselves will take the initiative in withdrawing the rights of companies to maintain them, has been evolved by Borough Council.

This plan was described by L. A. Pritchard, president of Council, in an address before the Perkasia Rotary Club. Mr. Pritchard also stated that the Councilmen are seriously considering putting the new ruling into effect in the near future.

This statement on the part of the Council head came as an explanation of recent failure to take councilmanic action placing a tax upon billboards, as advocated by the Perkasia Chamber of Commerce.

The business men, objecting strenuously to the increasing number of billboards within the borough limits, sent a committee to Council, asking that that body pass an ordinance levying a heavy tax upon all billboards, payable by the company that does the advertising, or the owner of the billboard.

Mr. Pritchard explained that Council has hesitated to take such action because it was felt that it could not legally place a tax upon anything that was not assessed. Billboards, as such, cannot be assessed, but the Councilmen felt that something should be done to make their use prohibitive. The ultimate solution, Mr. Pritchard believes, is for Council to instruct the assessors to raise the assessments on all properties that have standing billboards. This will have the effect of boosting the taxes of the landowner who permits the use of lots for this purpose.

Council has no desire to work a hardship on the land owners, and it is felt, Mr. Pritchard explained, that the landowners will quickly see to it that the billboards are removed, in order to get their taxes back to normal. In practically all cases, the amount of rental obtained for the use of the ground from the outdoor advertising companies is not sufficient to reimburse the property holder for any rise in taxation that the presence of the billboard may incur.

"Broadway Bad" Comes To Grand For 2-Day Run

Blazing a new trail for motion picture entertainment, "Broadway Bad," the Fox Film coming to the Grand Theatre tonight and Friday, combines gayety, music and displays of feminine beauty with tense emotional drama.

Featured in the cast are Joan Blondell, Ricardo Cortez, Ginger Rogers, Allen Vincent, Victor Jory, Adrienne Ames, Phil Tead, Francis McDonald, and Spencer Charters, Sidney Lanfield directed.

Heretofore gay music, sparkling dialogue and arrays of beautiful girls have been associated with sophisticated comedies or other films of light vein. In "Broadway Bad" they form a natural and colorful background for the dramatic story of a girl who fights a winning battle against circumstances and the handicaps of an undisciplined reputation.

Charlie Chase in a comedy, "Girl Grier," and pictorial review will also be shown.

DOYLESTOWN LEGION DENOUNCES UN-AMERICAN ORGANIZATION OPERATING IN BUCKS COUNTY

Opposed to Any Group in The County That is Opposed
To Law and Order

STANDARD OBJECTIVES

Resolutions Are Adopted and Will Be Widely Published

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 13.—Following reports made at the monthly meeting of the A. R. Atkinson, Jr., Post of the American Legion, Tuesday night that actions unbecoming an American citizen have been evidenced recently in Bucks county, the post unanimously passed a resolution, making known its united stand on such matters.

Copies of the resolution, it was directed, are to be sent to every newspaper editor in Bucks county and the North Penn section, to the county and State departments of the American Legion and to the Judges of the Courts of Bucks county.

Discussion of an alleged un-American organization operating in Bucks county brought forth much disapproval on the part of the Legion members, when it was announced by one veteran that he was positive that such organizations could not and would not subscribe to the preamble of the American Legion.

When it was announced that the secretary of one organization operating in the county is not a naturalized American citizen, and that he had gone on the witness stand in the county court recently and perjured himself in reference to newspaper and magazine articles that he admitted writing, there was no time lost by the Atkinson Post going on record opposing such un-American action.

The resolution includes the preamble of the Constitution of the American Legion and follows up by the declaration "that in conformance with the preamble of the Legion, the A. R. Atkinson Post goes on record as opposed to any and all organizations opposing and resisting the execution of law in Bucks county."

The preamble to the Constitution of the American Legion reads as follows, and is carried on the back of every membership card of the Legion:

"For God and country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a 100 per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the great war; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, State and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

DISCUSS MANY SUBJECTS AT MEETING OF GRANGE

Three Have Degrees Conferred at Middletown
Grange Session

EDGEWOOD DELEGATION

LANGHORNE, Apr. 13.—Over 40 people attended the bi-weekly meeting of Middletown Grange, in the Friends school house here last evening, at which time 10 members of Edgewood Grange were guests.

The third and fourth degrees were conferred upon two candidates from Edgewood Grange and one from Middletown Grange during the evening, the work being directed by officers of the local organization.

During the lecture hour Mrs. Joseph Briggs, Edgewood Grange, gave a short talk.

Another speaker was Lewis Satterthwaite, of Newtown, who told of the splendid growth of the Newtown Co-operative Association. This association was organized in 1922, for the purpose of procuring fertilizer for Bucks County farmers at wholesale prices. The work has expanded to such an extent that a new warehouse was erected this year. Since its organization the association has increased its output to a quantity nearly four times as great as the first year.

An interesting talk was delivered by Joseph Briggs, Edgewood Grange, who gave reasons for mounting school taxes, and told of laws governing operation of public schools. Among the reasons given for increased school taxes were: Increased needs of students through greater variety of subjects, larger number of boys and girls attending high school, increased population in country districts.

Remarks were also made by Amos Satterthwaite, Edgewood grand master.

The program was concluded by singing of "In the Garden." Refreshments were served by members of Middletown association.

To Judge Britishers

On this gentleman's shoulders rests the responsibility that may have much to do with the peace of Europe. He is Vassily Ulrich, who will be the presiding judge at the trial of the British engineers who are charged by the Soviet Union with sabotage and espionage. The case has caused a severe strain on diplomatic relations between Britain and the Soviet. If the accused men are found guilty and sentenced to death, trouble may ensue, according to observers.

PHYSICIANS APPROVE TOXIN ANTI-TOXIN PLAN

County Doctors Arrange For Administration to Children
Under 10

DR. PIERSOL SPEAKER

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 13.—A plan was approved yesterday by physicians affiliated with the Bucks County Medical Society for county-wide administration of toxin-anti toxin to all children of the county under 10 years of age. More definite plans for administration of the toxin for prevention of diphtheria will be made by the physicians within the next few weeks.

The society likewise voiced its approval at its meeting yesterday in the Fountain House, here, of state plan for conducting child health programs. The Bucks County society will cooperate in the state program for such.

Fifty-four were numbered in the group of doctors and their wives, yesterday. A shad dinner was enjoyed at the Fountain House at 12 o'clock.

Dr. James Collins, president of the society, introduced at 1.30 Dr. George Morris Piersol, Philadelphia, who delivered an address on the recent meeting of the College of Physicians at Montreal, Canada, which 1600 American physicians attended.

The business meeting commenced at 2.30 and marked the close of the day's program.

Grange Members Consider Bucks County Judge Efficient

WYCOMBE, Apr. 13.—During a discussion which related to the courts of justice of this day, members of Pineville Grange in session in the Sunday school rooms of the Wycombe Baptist Church expressed the opinion that the Judges of the Bucks county courts are efficient and that they try to do what they believe to be right. The opinion was also expressed that Bucks county also has a District Attorney who is efficient.

The question which gave rise to these expressions of opinion was "Give the good and bad points of our courts of today." This was assigned J. Harvey Jones, who said he believes it impossible to get away from the present jury system. His intimation was that it would be an unwise move to attempt to substitute some other method for the jury system.

SENATE MAY ADJOURN APR. 21

Harrisburg, Apr. 13.—Reports that Senate leaders are prepared to finish their work and adjourn Friday, April 21st were current at the capitol today. Final adjournment however, is tentative upon the ability of the House to clear its calendar and leaders in the lower branch were not as optimistic about finishing next week. If it can be accomplished by remaining as late as Saturday noon, that will be program, they asserted. They plan to end the present legislative week today.

Members of both branches already have publicly admitted the strong possibility of an extraordinary session before the end of the year.

In a resolution adopted last January in the House, today was to have been the final day of the session. The Senate is holding the resolution and will amend it by changing the date as soon as adjournment is definitely in sight.

MARRIED WOMEN TEACHING SCHOOL IN COUNTY LISTED

Approximately One-Sixth of Them Found On List

SPELLING BEE, APRIL 21

Expect to Issue Many Certificates for Perfect
Attendance

DOYLESTOWN, April 13.—About one-sixth of the women who have been engaged in teaching in the schools of Bucks county during the current year are married, or have been married and are now depending upon themselves in earning a livelihood.

An unofficial survey of approximately 575 teachers throughout the county shows that 104 of the women engaged in teaching are married or had at one time been married.

As a result of the depression, it is believed that the number of married women teachers will be still higher during the next school term. At least one township is known to be employing teachers who at one time were engaged in this profession, abandoned it for other duties and now are again seeking positions as teachers.

Employment of the married women as teachers is most prevalent in the rural districts. The unofficial survey revealed that there are some districts where there are comparatively few women teachers employed. On the other hand, one rural district employing nine teachers, lists seven of them as married women. Another district lists sixty-six and two-thirds percent of its teachers as married women.

The following statistics show the number of teachers who are listed as being married women, a few of them, however, probably widows: Bedminster, 6; Bridgeton, 3; Bristol borough, 3; Buckingham, 3; Doylestown township, 1; East Rockhill, 4; Hilltown, 4; Ivyland, 1; Langhorne-Middletown, 3; Lower Makefield, 5; Lower Southampton, 1; Milford, 1; Morrisville, 1; New Britain township, 2; Newtown borough, 1; Newtown township, 3; Northampton, 3; Perkasia, 3; Plumstead, 5; Quakertown, 1; Richland township, 6; Richlandtown, 1; Riegelsville, 3; Sellersville, 2; Perk-Sell, 1; Silverdale, 1; Solebury, 7; Springfield, 6; Telford, 1; Tinicum, 5; Trumbauersville, 1; Upper Makefield, 3; Warminster, 2; Warrington, 2; West Rockhill, 2; Wrightstown, 1; Yardley, 4.

In connection with the school activities of the county, announcement has been made from the office of County Superintendent J. Harry Hoffman that the final examination for the eighth grade pupils throughout the county will take place on April 13 and 28 and on May 19.

Announcement has been made also that the county spelling contest will take place in the auditorium of Doylestown High School on Friday afternoon, April 21, at 2 o'clock. Judges will be selected for this event in the near future.

The superintendent's office force is at present engaged in collecting data concerning the teachers throughout the county. When this is completed it will be placed on file and in a moment's glance the authorities will be enabled to tell how long the teacher has been in the service and the extent of preparation for the teaching profession.

During the past few days the superintendent's office has received from the Department of Public Instruction in Harrisburg 1250 perfect attendance certificates and 1650 perfect attendance seals. The certificates will be awarded to pupils who have rounded out five years of perfect attendance or to those who during the past year were neither tardy nor absent.

Pupils who previously held these certificates and who were enabled to score another perfect attendance record will have seals placed upon their certificates. At the end of five years, if the child has had a perfect record for that length of time, it will receive another certificate. Last year more than 1900 perfect attendance certificates were distributed among the pupils throughout the county.

Marcella J. Moyer, who last June was graduated from Hilltown High School, Blooming Glen, was neither tardy nor absent from school for a period of nine years.

JAPAN AND THE WORLD

Yosuke Matsuoka, now visiting the United States on his way home from Geneva where he was chief of the Japanese delegation to the League of Nations, defends Japan's course in Manchuria by telling Americans Tokyo's policy is not understood.

He emphasizes the "anarchy in China" and cites that as being "at the root of all the troubles in the Far East." Peace and welfare, he insists, is the purpose of Japan in the Far East and "the reason for Manchukuo."

All of this is old argument. It has been used repeatedly by Japanese officials and has become stale. Like his colleagues in Tokyo, Mr. Matsuoka sees the situation solely from the Japanese viewpoint, totally disregarding the important question of Japan's treaty obligations which have been so flagrantly violated.

He admits that world opinion is against Japan, but it is a case where all nations are out of step except Japan.

"It is not a pleasure for me to fight," he says, "but I have had to fight for my country. I have tried to make the western world understand the difficulties of Japan's position. Japan has been waging a war against a world that has misunderstood her, and she has suffered a defeat. I believe time will justify her action. I am confident that at a not far distant date the rest of the world will say that we have not been wrong or selfish in our motives."

The misunderstanding is on Japan's part rather than the world's. The ruthlessness with which Japan has ignored treaties in pursuit of territorial conquest is a firmly established fact in the minds of all who have followed the Japanese policy. This can not be dodged. And, as to the maintenance of peace in the Far East, where is any peace there? The flames of war continue to spread with the torch being borne by Japanese hands.

It is Japan that needs to awaken. The probability is that eventually she will. She may think now that she can continue to defy world opinion, but such is not likely to prove the case. Her statements would do well to recognize this before it is too late for the consequences to be avoided.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

"MARY FAITH"

by Beatrice Burton

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, young and comely orphan, is secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy young business man. She informs Mark that she is leaving her position to marry Kimberley Farrell, handsome young lawyer, to whom she has been engaged for some time. Invited to Kim's house for dinner, Mary Faith is greeted coldly by his mother. Later, Kim startles Mary Faith by breaking his engagement and asking for the ring. The next morning, Mary Faith informs her co-workers that she is not to be married. She asks them to take back their presents. After working late, Mark Nesbit takes Mary Faith to dinner and home to her boarding house in his car. Slowly Mary Faith learns to live her life without Kim. When Mark Nesbit injures his ankle, Mary Faith is driven to his country home to take dictation. She meets his mother and enjoys the charming home life of the Nesbits. Jean Bartlett, Mary Faith's office friend, laughingly tells her she should marry Mark Nesbit.

CHAPTER XI

"I may go down to the office tomorrow," he told her at the end of the afternoon. "I can get around pretty well now with a cane, and I'd like to be on the job just now at the close of the year."

Mary Faith shook her head. "Oh, I think you ought to wait for a few days before you try it, Mr. Nesbit. The stairs in the building are so steep and the floors are so slippery."

But the next morning when she got down to the office there was a light burning behind the frosted glass pane in his door.

"Great Gosh!" she said on the job this morning, Miss Fenton, Stanley Odeskalka told her, looking up from the typewriter that he was going. "Gee, if I was my own boss, the way he is, I bet I wouldn't come down to work on a cane! I'd stay home for another month!"

At half past nine exactly the buzzer on Mary Faith's desk sounded. She got up and carried the morning mail into Mark Nesbit's office, just as she had carried it in to him at half past nine every morning for years.

It was on the tip of her tongue to say to him: "Well, you made it, I see! But you know you ought to have stayed at home!"

All she did say, however, was "Good morning, Mr. Nesbit," just as she had always said it, in a polite office voice.

"Good morning, Mary Faith," he smiled at her gravely as he picked up one of the envelopes that she laid before him on the desk. "Will you please ask Hasset to come up here in about ten minutes?"

Everything was just as it always had been. The name both of them clicked back into the well-oiled office machinery of the Nesbit Mercantile Company.

And yet there was a difference. That noon he came limping into her office and stood beside her desk. He had on his overcoat and his hat and brief-case were in his hand.

"Good-bye, Mary Faith," he said. "Don't work late. Remember it's Saturday. I'm going to miss you at lunch today. We've had some pretty good talks the last couple of weeks, haven't we?"

"Haven't we?" Mary Faith's face flushed with pleasure. "These two weeks have been a holiday for me; but they couldn't have been so very grand for you, shut up in one room most of the time."

She pushed back her chair and got up as he turned to go.

"I'm going to go down to your car with you, if you don't mind," she said. "First thing you know your cane will slip on this floor and you'll be back in the wheel chair for another two weeks."

Such was the scene that took place in the office and got into the elevator. Down in the street the new, open colored limousine waited. As Mark Nesbit paused beside it, with his foot on the step, he had turned and held one of Mary Faith's hands tightly in his for a second.

"You mother me, don't you, Mary Faith?" he asked, his head bent over hers. "And, as you know, I like it! I do. I think I do."

"Great Gosh!" but you and the boss are getting to be chummy!" Jean Bartlett remarked when she walked into the office two or three minutes afterward. "It's this keeps up you'll soon be forgetting. Hand-me-downs, muddled-down him and built-up shoulders!"

Later that afternoon when Mary Faith got home there was a long brown box for her lying on the table in the hall.

"A colored chauffeur—in livery, if you please—brought it here about one o'clock," Mrs. Pickett told her, coming out of the parlor. "There's roses and narcissus in it, by the way."

"I never have been able to abide the smell of narcissus since Mr. P's funeral!"

But she stood close by, watching, while Mary Faith opened the box and lifted out the pink roses and tawny white narcissus that lay in it.

"There's a card with them, Mary Faith," she said. "The card was a dark purplish-red one—kind of a plum color. I told Mr. McClintock and Mr. Vining that I bet it was your Mr. Nesbit's card."

Mary Faith knew that the flowers were from Mark Nesbit before she drew his card out of the envelope that had been tucked among them. Who else would be sending flowers to her?

Mrs. Pickett read the card over her shoulder. "Humm—he did send them. Well, this begins to look serious, Mary Faith."

"Nonsense, Mrs. Pickett!" Mary Faith said sensibly. "This is just his way of saying 'thanks' for all the extra work I've done for him the last couple of weeks."

Mrs. Pickett sniffed and shrugged her shoulders. "You've done lots of extra work for him long before now, and he never sent you flowers," she pointed out. "And I know that I've done lots of extra work for him in my lifetime, too, but not one of them ever sent me a whole box of roses, or even a simple dandelion! He's been lending you books, too. I've seen them up in your room with his name written in them. . . . You mark my words, Mary Faith, he means business!"

That was on Saturday.

At half past four on the next Friday afternoon, Mark Nesbit came into Mary Faith's little office and sat down on the corner of her desk.

"Mary Faith, do you know what a dinner ring is?" he asked, lighting a cigarette.

She said that she did. "It's a large ring that women wear on their little finger. It's usually made of platinum or white gold and is set with diamonds, I believe. It's a very special kind of ring."

"Well, Judy wants one for Christmas. She says some of her buddies at school have them. But, gosh, wouldn't it be too elaborate for her?"

"She's only fifteen, isn't she?" mused Mary Faith. She had not seen Judy Nesbit, who was the baby of the family, for three years, and she remembered her at a simple child's party with long slim legs and the comical-sweet face of a pansy.

"It seems to me she's pretty young for diamonds. But you must get her some kind of a ring. . . . You know, when you've set your heart on a certain thing it's very disappointing not to get it on Christmas morning."

"That's true," he nodded and got up from the corner of the desk.

"Well, will you help me pick out a ring for her then? I'll get my car out of the parking space and meet you downstairs in five minutes."

Outside it was cold and crisp and snowy—perfect holiday weather. By the time Mark Nesbit's car had nosed its way into the crowded shopping district the streets were filled with sapphire dusk and red-and-green festoons of light were shining in the shop windows.

The car was held up for two or three minutes in the traffic at the corner of Spring Street and Sixth. That corner had once been a place of enchantment for Mary Faith because it was there that she had always waited for Kim when she had an engagement with him.

On the next corner stood the City Bank building where he worked. She found herself looking up at the lighted windows of McIntire and Westover on the fifth floor. . . . Kim was probably up there now, winding up his day's work in the offices where he had met that Janet-girl of his.

"I think we'll go to Amburster's for the ring," Mark Nesbit was saying as he swung his car into the vaulting doorway of the Spring Street Garage. "I have a charge account there, haven't I, Mary Faith?"

There were no holly wreaths, no red and green lights, in the windows of Amburster's jewelry store. For Amburster's prided itself on its exclusiveness and its old-fashioned dignity. It was the oldest store on Spring Street. It never advertised in the newspapers and it never made any holiday display.

"Sometimes I bring my wrist-watch in here to have it regulated," Mary Faith said as they stepped inside. "And just to walk into the place makes me feel like the Queen of Siam."

A salesman in a frock coat and a high wing collar came up to them bowing, as Mary Faith said to herself, scraping. He led them halfway down the center aisle and laid two trays full of glittering rings on the showcase in front of them.

"Don't you think an aquamarine would be nice for Judy, Mr. Nesbit? Or a white-gold signet ring with just one or two little diamonds set in it, perhaps?" asked Mary Faith.

She had a sudden, uneasy feeling that someone was watching her. She half turned away from the showcase to look about her—and there, not ten feet from her, stood Kim Farrell!

Kim was leaning over the counter, holding two mesh bags in his hands. Beside him stood a girl whom Mary Faith could not see.

He was not looking at the mesh bags or at the girl. His eyes were on Mary Faith's eyes; and as she watched him he laid the bags down upon the showcase and came toward her.

"Hello," he said and held out his hand.

"Hello, yourself," Mary Faith never knew how she managed to say those two words in that cheerful, offhand way. She did not touch his hand.

"How are you these days, Mary Faith?"

"Oh, I'm all right. I jog along," she answered. With an effort she turned her head away from him, then turned her whole body away.

"Don't you think an aquamarine would be just the thing?" she asked Mark Nesbit again, without clearly knowing what she said.

They finally decided on one. A small square one set in a circle of seed pearls. They waited while it was put into a white velvet box and wrapped up in white-and-silver paper.

There is general agreement that beer manufacturers are to be taxed
$1,000 annually. There are nearly 30 breweries operating in Pennsylvania at the present time.

Of course, all the taxes for retainers and brewers will pour into the State revenue coffers when a beer control bill is passed. That $2,600,000—plus will be available for whatever purpose is needed, most probably poor relief.

But every bottle of beer that now washes the parched throat of some thirsty Pennsylvanian means taxes lost to the State which never can be reclaimed.

JAPAN AND THE WORLD

Yosuke Matsuoka, now visiting the United States on his way home from Geneva where he was chief of the Japanese delegation to the League of Nations, defends Japan's course in Manchuria by telling Americans Tokyo's policy is not understood.

He emphasizes the "anarchy in China" and cites that as being "at the root of all the troubles in the Far East." Peace and welfare, he insists, is the purpose of Japan in the Far East and "the reason for Manchukuo."

All of this is old argument. It has been used repeatedly by Japanese officials and has become stale. Like his colleagues in Tokyo, Mr. Matsuoka sees the situation solely from the Japanese viewpoint, totally disregarding the important question of Japan's treaty obligations which have been so flagrantly violated.

He admits that world opinion is against Japan, but it is a case where all nations are out of step except Japan.

"It is not a pleasure for me to fight," he says, "but I have had to fight for my country. I have tried to make the western world understand the difficulties of Japan's position. Japan has been waging a war against a world that has misunderstood her, and she has suffered a defeat. I believe time will justify her action. I am confident that at a not far distant date the rest of the world will say that we have not been wrong or selfish in our motives."

The misunderstanding is on Japan's part rather than the world's. The ruthlessness with which Japan has ignored treaties in pursuit of territorial conquest is a firmly established fact in the minds of all who have followed the Japanese policy. This can not be dodged. And, as to the maintenance of peace in the Far East, where is any peace there? The flames of war continue to spread with the torch being borne by Japanese hands.

It is Japan that needs to awaken. The probability is that eventually she will. She may think now that she can continue to defy world opinion, but such is not likely to prove the case. Her statesmen would do well to recognize this before it is too late for the consequences to be avoided.

The best way to find your missing kinsfolk is to get rich.

If only the fever of patriotism would last until the day is paid.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful harmonies, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't take liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

"MARY FAITH"

by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, young and comely orphan, is secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy young business man. She informs Mark that she is leaving her position to marry Kimberley Farrell, handsome young lawyer, to whom she has been engaged for some time. Invited to Kim's house for dinner, Mary Faith is greeted coldly by his mother. Later, Kim starts Mary Faith by breaking his engagement and asking for the ring. The next morning, Mary Faith informs her co-workers that she is not to be married. She asks them to take back their presents. After working late, Mark Nesbit takes Mary Faith to dinner and home to her boarding house in his car. Slowly Mary Faith learns to live her life without Kim. When Mark Nesbit injures his ankle, Mary Faith is driven to his country home to take dictation. She meets his mother and enjoys the charming home life of the Nesbits. Jean Bartlett, Mary Faith's office friend, laughingly tells her she should marry Mark Nesbit.

"I may go down to the office tomorrow," he told her at the end of the afternoon. "I can't get around pretty well now with a cane, and I'd like to be on the job just now at the close of the year."

Mary Faith shook her head. "Oh, I think you ought to wait for a few days before you try it, Mr. Nesbit. The stairs in the building are so steep and the floors are so slippery."

But the next morning when she got down to the office there was a light burning behind the frosted glass pane in his door.

"Great Galusha's back on the job this morning," Miss Fenton's Stanley Oleskaki told her, looking up from the typewriter that he was doing. "Gee, if I was my own boss, the way he is, I bet I wouldn't come down to work on a cane! I'd stay home for another month."

At half past nine exactly the buzzer on Mary Faith's desk sounded. She got up and carried the morning mail into Mark Nesbit's office, just as she had carried it in to him at half past nine every morning for years.

It was on the tip of her tongue to say to him, "Well, you made it, I see! But you know you ought to have stayed at home."

All she did say, however, was "Good morning, Mr. Nesbit," just as she had always said it, in a polite office voice.

"Good morning, Mary Faith," he smiled at her gravely as he picked up one of the envelopes that she laid before him on the desk. "Will you please ask Bassett to come up here in about ten minutes?"

Everything was just as it always had been. Like magic both of them clicked back into the well-oiled office machinery of the Nesbit Mercantile Company.

And yet there was a difference. That noon he came limping into her office and stood beside her desk. He had on his overcoat and his hat and brief-case were in his hand.

"Good-bye, Mary Faith," he said. "Don't work late. Remember it's Saturday. I'm going to miss you at lunch today. We've had some pretty good talks the last couple of weeks, haven't we?"

"Haven't you?" Mary Faith's face flushed with pleasure. "These two weeks have been a holiday for me; but they couldn't have been so very grand for you, shut up in one room most of the time?"

"She pushed back her chair and got up as he turned to go."

"I'm going to go down to your car with you, if you don't mind," she said. "First thing you know your cane will slip on this floor and you'll be back in the wheel chair for another two weeks."

Side by side they crossed the office and got into the elevator. Down in the street they saw a blue-colored limousine, waiting. As Mark Nesbit paused to get it, without a word on the step he had turned and held one of Mary Faith's hands tightly in his for a second.

"You forget me, don't you, Mary Faith?" he asked, his head bent over hers. "And, as you know, I like it! I do. I think I do."

"Great Galusha, but you and the boys are going to be mighty!" Jean Bartlett remarked when she walked into the office two or three minutes afterward. "It's this keeps up you'll soon be forgetting. Hand-me-downs, mended-downs and built-up shoulders!"

Late that afternoon when Mary Faith got home there was a long box on her bed for her lying on the table in the hall.

"A colored chauffeur in a livery, if you please—brought it here about one o'clock," Mrs. Puckett told her, coming out of the parlor. "There's roses and narcissus in it, by the smell. I never have been able to abide the smell of narcissus since Mr. P's funeral."

But she stood close by, watching while Mary Faith opened the box and lifted out the pink roses and stately white narcissus that lay in it.

"There's a card with them, Mary Faith," she said. "The card was a dark purplish-red one—kind of a plum color. I told Mr. McClintock and Mr. Vining that I bet it was your Mr. Nesbit's card."

Mary Faith knew that the flowers were from Mark Nesbit before she drew his card out of the envelope that had been tucked among them. Who else would be sending flowers to her?

Mrs. Puckett read the card over her shoulder. "Hum—he did send them. Well, this begins to look serious, Mary Faith."

"Nonsense, Mrs. Puckett!" Mary Faith said sensibly. "This is just his way of saying 'thanks' for all the extra work I've done for him the last couple of weeks."

Mrs. Puckett sniffed and shrugged her shoulders. "You've done lots of extra work for him long before now, and he never sent you flowers," she pointed out. "And I know that I've done lots of extra work for men folks in my lifetime, too, but not one of them ever sent me a whole box of roses, or even a simple dandelion! He's been lending you books, too. I've seen them up in your room with his name written in them. You mark my words, Mary Faith, he means business!"

That was on Saturday. At half past four on the next Friday afternoon, Mark Nesbit came into Mary Faith's little office and sat down on the corner of her desk.

"Mary Faith, do you know what a dinner ring is?" he asked, lighting a cigarette.

She said that she did. "It's a large ring that women wear on their little finger. It's usually made of platinum or white gold and is set with diamonds, I believe. It's a very special kind of ring."

"Well, Judy wants one for Christmas. She says some of her buddies at school have them. But, gosh, wouldn't it be too elaborate for her?"

"She's only fifteen, isn't she?" mused Mary Faith. She had not seen Judy Nesbit, who was the baby of the family, for three years, and she remembered her at a simple child's party with long slim legs and the comical-sweet face of a pansy.

"It seems to me she's pretty young for diamonds. But you must get her some kind of a ring. . . . You know, when you've set your heart on a certain thing it's very disappointing not to get it on Christmas morning."

"That's true," he nodded and got up from the corner of the desk.

"Well, will you help me pick out a ring for her then? I'll get my car out of the parking space and meet you downstairs in five minutes."

Outside it was cold and crisp and snowy—perfect holiday weather. By the time Mark Nesbit's car had nosed its way into the crowded shopping district the streets were filled with sapphire dusk and red-and-green festoons of light were shining in the shop windows.

The car was held up for two or three minutes in the traffic at the corner of Spring Street and Sixth. That corner had once been a place of enchantment for Mary Faith because it was there that she had always waited for Kim when she had an engagement with him.

On the next corner stood the City Bank building where he worked. She found herself looking up at the lighted windows of McIntire and Westover on the fifth floor. . . . Mary Faith was probably up there now, winding up his day's work in the offices where he had met that Janet-girl of his.

"I think we'll go to Armbruster's for the ring," Mark Nesbit was saying as he swung his car into the yawning doorway of the Spring Street Garage. "I have a charge account there, haven't I, Mary Faith?"

There were no holy wreaths, no red-and-green lights, in the windows of Armbruster's jewelry store. For Armbruster's prided itself on its exclusiveness and its old-fashioned dignity. It was the oldest store on Spring Street. It never advertised in the newspapers and it never made any holiday display.

"Sometimes I bring my wrist-watch in here to have it regulated," Mary Faith said as they stepped inside. "And just to walk into the place makes me feel like the Queen of Siam."

A salesman in a frock coat and a high wing collar came up to them bowing, as Mary Faith said to herself, scraping. He led them halfway down the center aisle and laid two trays full of glittering rings on the showcase in front of them.

"Don't you think an aquamarine would be nice for Judy, Mr. Nesbit? Or a white-gold signet ring with just one or two little diamonds set in it, perhaps?" asked Mary Faith.

She had a sudden, uneasy feeling that someone was watching her. She half turned away from the showcase to look about her—and there, not ten feet from her, stood Kim Farrell!

Kim was leaning over the counter, holding two mesh bags in his hands. Beside him stood a girl whom Mary Faith could not see.

He was not looking at the mesh bags or at the girl. His eyes were on Mary Faith's eyes; and as she watched him he laid the bags down upon the showcase and came toward her.

"Hello," he said and held out his hand.

"Hello, yourself," Mary Faith never knew how she managed to say those two words in that cheerful, offhand way. She did not touch his hand.

"How are you these days, Mary Faith?"

"Oh, I'm all right. I jog along," she answered. With an effort she turned her head away from him, then turned her whole body away.

"Don't you think an aquamarine would be just the thing?" she asked Mark Nesbit again, without clearly knowing what she said.

They finally decided on one. A small square one set in a circle of seed pearls. They waited while it was put into a white velvet box and wrapped up in white-and-silver paper.

STATE LOSES HUGE SUM IN BEER REVENUE

By G. Everett Doying
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1933, by I. N. S.)

While political jealousies and factional bickerings hamstring all beer taxing proposals in legislative chambers at Harrisburg the Commonwealth treasury has lost a maximum of $372,000—or a minimum of half that figure—in potential beer taxes in the six years that have elapsed since legalization of 3.2 per cent beer.

In addition, the State is losing anywhere from $31,000 to $62,000 daily in beer taxes as long as no State regulatory measure is in effect.

Collection of more than $2,600,000 in license fees from retailers is approximately $30,000 from brewers has been delayed for the same reason.

These facts were compiled today by International News Service in a check with internal revenue collectors on the amount of Federal taxes paid for beer in Pennsylvania since April 7th. The maximum figure of $372,000 in taxes lost through beer already sold computed on the basis of the $2.48 barrel tax proposed by Governor Gifford Pinchot.

Only $1.24 tax a barrel is provided the Connor-Sowers beer taxing measure, which means a total minimum loss to date under that bill's provisions is $126,000.

Federal revenue collectors estimate at the government tax of $5 a barrel is been paid on 150,000 barrels in Pennsylvania to date.

At the present rate, that means an additional 25,000 barrels of beer is being brewed every day—beer which the government tax is being paid but on which there is no provision for derivation of state revenue.

It is anticipated retail beer dispensers will be taxed approximately $200 annually for a license, the money, of course, payable in advance.

Using government estimates again, there are 5,500 retail establishments in Eastern Pennsylvania selling beer a potential tax of $1,100,000 for the State from that source.

The western end of the State has lost 3,000 dispensers, or a probable tax of $600,000. In the middle section there are about 4,500 beer retailers, representing a maximum tax of $900,000.

Thus, for the three Federal districts, Pennsylvania has a potential income of $2,600,000 from beer sellers—revenue which is expected to be earmarked for poor relief for a year or two and then divided between state and community.

There is general agreement that beer manufacturers are to be taxed $1,000 annually. There are nearly 30 breweries operating in Pennsylvania at the present time.

Of course, all the taxes for retailers and brewers will pour into the State revenue coffers when a beer control bill is passed. That $2,600,000—plus will be available for whatever purpose is needed, most probably poor relief.

But every bottle of beer that now washes the parched throat of some thirsty Pennsylvanian means taxes lost to the State which never can be reclaimed.

HARRISBURG, Apr. 13.—(INS)—Determined to give Pennsylvania an early opportunity to express its opinion on proposed eradication of the Eighteenth Amendment, the Senate considered on final passage today another McClure constitutional convention bill.

The bill, designing the machinery for the Keystone state's action on repeal, provides for the election of 15 delegates at large in November. Gov. Gifford Pinchot vetoed Senator John J. McClure's first bill because the election of 24 delegates from congressional districts and 17 at large was unfair.

Washington Letter

By George E. Durno
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13.—(INS)—President Roosevelt's "new deal" is keeping things humming around the White House and the mail man staggering under a terrific load.

What used to be one of the quietest offices in Washington now fairly exudes activity. Extra stenographers, typists and file clerks have been tucked into every available bit of office space and still the rush of business continues unabated.

Twenty-two additional workers have been added to the staff since March 4 in an effort to clean up the unprecedented flood of mail that is descending on Mr. Roosevelt. Seventeen of these were "borrowed" from other government departments and five were brought down from New York headquarters.

Everyone in the country seems to have hit upon the idea of either writing or wiring the President a message of commendation, according to the harassed group of mail clerks whose duty it is to sort the huge mass of correspondence brought in from the Post Office daily.

In the past, there has been a flurry of this type of mail immediately after inauguration, but always it has petered out in a week or so. Mr. Roosevelt's well-wishers are still investing in three-cent stamps and telegraph tolls.

Over ninety per cent of the mail received is "favorable," according to those who have to answer it. Veterans of the Executive Office can not recall in a forty-year period any such avalanche of letters as the advent of the current administration has unleashed, nor can they remember when a more united expression of confidence was expressed.

Back in the placid days of the Coolidge administration, the White House functioned with a staff of 38. Then came the Hoover administration, geared for efficiency with three secretaries instead of one, and 28 workers were added. Today, typewriters are clicking and file cases hanging under the hands of 116 employees.

The work of reading and dictating answers to routine mail used to be in the hands of four men. Now, however, they have found themselves literally "snowed under" and have had to designate a group of the veteran stenographers as their assistants.

"It's not like the old days," they say, as they work Saturday afternoons, late and Sundays in an effort to catch up.

But they all seem to like the "new deal."

GAME TODAY BETWEEN MORRISVILLE AND FALLS

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 13.—Officer's Morrisville high school nine will raise the curtain on the regional baseball season this afternoon at Island Field, opposing Falls Township high.

Both teams are members of the Lower Bucks County League, of which Bristol is the defending champion. In a practice tilt Tuesday afternoon, the Fallsington outfit walked all over Upper Moreland High of Willow Grove to the tune of 19-4 in a three-inning game, so the visitors can be expected to put up a great battle against Morrisville.
